

Across

- 3. A phrase which appears on the screen to ask the user for input.
- 5. This is the name of the machine code program produced by the translation by a compiler.
- 8. Programs which carry out the translation of a program from one computer language to another computer language.
- 10. Translates a high level language into machine code one instruction at a time.
- 11. Changing each step of your refinements into the programming
- 12. A mistake which causes the program to produce an unexpected result, for example, using an incorrect formula.
- 13. Programs which control the operation of a computer system.

Down

- 1. A list of instructions which tell the processor what to do.
- 2. Translates a high level language into machine code in a single operation.
- 4. The original high level language program before it is translated by a compiler.
- 6. Beginner's All-purpose Symbolic Instruction Code.
- 7. The processor's own language made up of binary numbers (0 and 1 only).
- 8. The changing of a program from one programming language into another programming language.
- 9. A mistake in a programming function - for example PRIN instead of PRINT.